Leveling System for Guided Reading and Early-Intervention Programs

Titles with Guided Reading Levels cited in this catalog have been officially leveled by using the Fountas & Pinnell Text Level Gradient™ Leveling System unless otherwise noted. Titles with estimated GRLs have been leveled by a trained reading consultant using the same text characteristics and guidelines. Early Intervention levels are provided for use in early intervention programs like Reading Recovery®. Visit lernerbooks.com for the most up-to-date leveling information.

Wind Power

Wind power has been around for a very long time. Farmers have been using windmills to power machines for centuries.

Today humans use wind turbines to generate electricity. In order to create enough electricity to power lots of homes, they put lots of wind turbines together in wind farms.

To get as much wind as possible, wind farms are placed on flat, open areas where the wind blows at least 14 miles (22 km) per hour. Some wind farms are in the ocean, where the wind is strong.

Wind turns the blades, which spin the shaft, which connects to a generator. The spinning movement is what generates electricity.

Choosing Your Pet

Spend time with your puppy's mother. Is she the kind of dog you want your puppy to be when it is grown? Is she friendly?

Watch how the puppies behave. Sit with them. Which puppy is shy? Which is friendly? Which is happy and wags its tail?

Choose the puppy you want. A healthy puppy smells a little like milk. It has a cool, wet nose.

You can take your puppy home when it is eight- or ten-weeks old. Hold the puppy on your lap for the ride home. Bring a soft blanket. It calms the puppy. Plus, you have it in case the puppy pees or gets sick.

The gardener washes the tomatoes.

She will use them to make pasta sauce.

What would you do with this tomatoes?

At Athens High School, Joe played basketball and football. He was one of the best point guards in Ohio. But he was even better at football. In 2014, he won the Mr. Football award as the best player in the state. He graduated from Athens in 2015. In three seasons on the varsity team, Joe had thrown 157 touchdown passes and just 17 interceptions.

Burrow's high school stats made him popular with college coaches around the U.S. Coaches from schools in Nebraska, Oklahoma, and Michigan contacted him. But he told them that he had already chosen a college. He was going to Ohio State University.

In 2017, Burrow received a special honor. Officials at Athens High School gave their football stadium a new name: Joe Burrow Stadium.

Burrow playing for Ohio State in 2016.

Most star high school players don't start out being stars in college. Burrow sat on the bench for Ohio State's entire 2015 season. In 2016, he played in five games as the team's backup quarterback. He was the backup again the following year and played in five more games. Burrow had played well in his 10 college games. But if he wanted to be a starting quarterback, he would have to do it at a different school.

Luke smiled. Zahra giggled.

"Rufus McGuiken better never look me in the eyes," she said. "I'd give him a treat all right."

Luke laughed out loud and sat me back on his lap. He scratched my head while I thought about Rufus.

I thought Rufus was tops. But Zahra and Rufus never got along. They fought over me, mostly. Over who could walk me, to be precise.

Most days, Zahra would knock on the door and offer to take me for a walk while Luke worked. Most days, Luke said yes, tossed Zahra my leash, and off we'd go.

As soon as we left, Rufus would bound out of his door and insist that he come with us. This drove Zahra crazy.

Zahra was nine months older than Rufus. And those nine months gave Zahra the "right" to be trusted to take a wild Brisket like me to the park and make sure I ran through my obedience drills. Since Rufus was "way younger," his job was to make sure I got all my zoomies in and wiggles out.

If you ask me, the two of them made the perfect combination for an afternoon at the park. Even if they both bickered a lot.

"Zahra," Luke said. "I'm sorry. But we'll have to video-chat another time. Just got an alert that we've got a new case."

Luke scratched my wiry fur and asked if I was ready for a new job. I barked, YES!

"I better let you go straightaway then," Zahra said. "Anyway, Mom just got home. Dad has tea ready, and Mom will want to know how my homework is coming along."

Luke smiled. "Hope we haven't kept you from it."

"Not at all! I learned something new. I'll tell Rufus about it after tea. Goodbye, Brisket!"

(UN)HAPPY HALLOWEEN

"Dad, let's go!" I try not to pace in the family room while I wait for Dad. But it's hard not to. It's Halloween, which means I have two places to be and no time to waste. When Dad and I are finally in the van on the way to Mary Ann's house, I go over the schedule with him again. "I'll call you when we're done eating pizza. Then you're going to pick me up."

from Mary Ann's and take me to Pamela's house so I can trick-or-treat."

Dad glances at me. "Are you sure you don't want to just stay at Mary Ann's?" I let out a breath. Mom and Dad think that I'm trying to do too much in one night and that I should have picked either Mary Ann's party or trick-or-treating. But I really want to do both things. "Dad, please. We've already talked about this."

HORRID LITTLE GIRL

It was eleven thirty the next morning when Titch walked into the library carrying a brown paper bag. Kenneth Webb eyed her suspiciously from behind his counter. He was a thin young man with round glasses and a red moustache.

"Just a minute," he rapped. "What have you got there?"

"Jam," said Titch. "Strawberry. It's for my mum."

"Hmm. Well don't go sneaking it on my books. And no talking either, do you hear?"

Titch looked all around. The teen-section was deserted as usual. "There's nobody to talk to," she chirped.

"Good," snipped Webb. "That's just the way I like it—no horrible little hooligans putting their grubby paws on my stock, making the shelves

Titch had no intention of touching anything. She wasn't here for books. She was on a crucial mission for the Outfit. She was here because it was Tuesday, the day Prunella always drove from the city to visit her boyfriend. She'd arrive at the library at quarter to twelve, and at twelve o'clock Kenneth would close the teen section, and he and Prunella would go off to lunch at the restaurant Fox and Pleasant.

Titch hovered behind the racks of books, pretending she was looking for something. She knew Kenneth wouldn't offer help—he'd leave a kid searching the shelves all day before he'd stir from his place behind the counter. He hated kids as much as his father did, and had only left the farm because he was scared of cows. The only time he was ever nice to a kid was when Prunella was watching him.

She arrived at the usual time. Titch spied on the couple through a gap in the books, screening

"Rosa is the best," Emika said, "but she and Coach Garcia have made a big mistake."

Emika, Jabira and Kelly made their way toward the food court in the Bay Centre in downtown Victoria.

"Here I was worrying that we'd start to lose games without Rosa," Emika went on. "This is going to be worse than I imagined. It's a disaster. There's no way I can be a captain with Maram."

"Maybe it will work out fine," Kelly shrugged.

Emika gave Kelly a look. "Did you see how she jumped in to take over my corner kick? I bet she'll try to take over being captain, too. That's what she always does. Remember when she spent all summer practising throw-ins so she could take those? Or when she practised being a goalkeeper in case she could play in net instead of Jussdeep? She'll try to do it all by herself."

"No one has to do anything by themselves," Jabira said.

"We have our wolf pack. That's what Rosa always says."

"Besides," Kelly offered, "it's not just anyone who picked you to be co-captains. It's Rosa. And if Rosa thinks you two will make good co-captains, maybe she's onto something."

Jabira looked sideways at Emika as she spoke to Kelly. "I'd feel really important if somebody like Rosa picked me to be a captain, wouldn't you?"

Emika tingled with pride. It does feel pretty special that Rosa chose me, she thought.

"It'd be a big honour, for sure," Kelly also looked at Emika out of the corner of her eye. "If it were me, I wouldn't want to let Rosa down."

Emika raised her hand. "Okay, okay. I get it. I'll give it a shot. For Rosa."

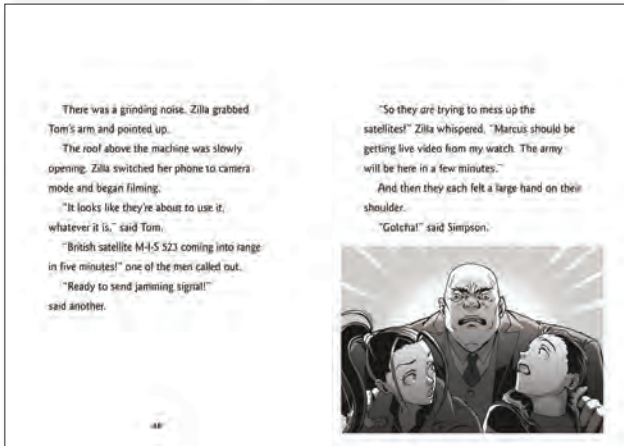

"And for the wolf pack," Jabira added.

"And for the wolf pack," Emika agreed. "Let's hope Maram thinks the same."

"Give her a chance," Jabira said. "I think my sister might surprise you."

Emika forced herself to smile. How could Jabira ever think anything hopeful about her sister? After all, Maram treated Jabira as if she wasn't even there.

The girls reached the escalator in the mall. Emika and Kelly held Jabira by the elbows as they always did on the escalator. Sometimes Jabira had to struggle to get her left leg onto the moving steps.

CHAPTER 2

SUNDAY

The bridge looks at least a hundred years old, probably more. Does the Department of Transportation even inspect ancient bridges? I wonder. I probably should have checked that before climbing out onto the crumbling old death trap. But I want to walk across it. I want to conquer my fear. I stand at the edge of the bridge. The wood planks of the tracks and the bricks beneath them appear solid. And the iron handrails seem sturdy. But, as always, my radar is up and running, looking for faults.

The river rushes below, green and frothing and murky, but not as deep as the mighty

Mississippi, the river Dad's bridge collapsed into on that horrible day. I have to remind myself that this is not that river. The periphery of my vision closes in until it's all a blur and little dots appear. I grasp the iron bar with my slick palm and close my eyes.

I can do this, I say to myself. I can just hurry across and back and then I'll have conquered my fear. Casey will be so proud of me.

The tracks run down the middle of the bridge. I take one tentative step on the worn, gray planks, then another.

A bird squawks from its perch in a tree on the river bank. My legs ignore my brain's directions and go limp. I collapse into a squat. "Go away, bird!" I say into my palms.

I practice my box breathing: four counts in, hold for four, four counts out, hold for four. The problem is that I know too much. This railroad bridge could have a design flaw similar to the one that led to Dad's bridge collapse. The bricks could be too old or so worn that they might crumble when too much weight is on the bridge and drop everything above it.

COMPARING ANIMAL TRAITS
DIORAMA PROJECT

Select and read a book from the Comparing Animal Traits series. Then create a diorama of the animal's habitat. Your diorama should include models of the following:

- The title animal
- Plant life common in the animal's habitat
- Land or water features, such as mountains or rivers, that are present in the animal's habitat
- Examples of the plants and animals that the title animal eats

When you have finished your diorama, write a paragraph that explains why your animal is able to survive well in its habitat. Then choose a habitat that would not be a good match for your animal. Write a second paragraph that shares three or more reasons why your animal may not survive in this habitat.

WHAT'S GREAT ABOUT THE MINNESOTA FLAG?

Minnesota's flag has a blue background with a gold border. A seal is in the center of the flag. The scene in the center of the seal shows a farmer plowing a field and an American Indian riding a horse. Above the scene is the state's motto L'Etoile du Nord, which means "the Star of the North" in French. A wreath of lady's slippers, which are Minnesota's state flower, surrounds the scene. There are three dates in the wreath. At the top is 1858, the year Minnesota became a state. To the left is 1819, the year settlers founded Fort Snelling. To the right is 1893, the year the state adopted the flag. Nineteen stars surround the wreath. There are four clusters of four stars and one cluster of three stars. The stars show Minnesota was the nineteenth state to join the United States.

1. What does L'Etoile du Nord mean? Circle your answer in the text.
2. What are the three dates shown on the state flag? Underline the sentence or the sentences in which you found your answer.
3. Why are there nineteen stars on the flag? Underline the sentence or the sentences in which you found your answer.

Design a flag for your school in the space at right. Then write a paragraph answering the following questions: What colors did you choose for your flag? Why? Do your colors represent anything? What are they? Why did you choose them?
