ABOUT Decodable Books

Our early literacy offerings are informed by the Science of Reading and can be used to support reading instruction, practice, and engagement. Used in order, they provide a progressive scope and sequence that builds a student's confidence in their ability to read independently. Decodable books are a critical part of any literacy program, used alongside any phonics curriculum as a structured way to practice phonics skills.

How to use decodable books to support early literacy

Step 1: Learn Letter Sounds

Alongside explicit reading instruction, students need practice connecting letters and the sounds they make to the written word.

Step 2: Read Decodable Books

As students progress, they need access to books that allow them to become proficient in decoding, comprehending, and writing to solidify their learning.

Step 3: Practice Reading to Develop Fluency

Like other skills, things like decoding, letter knowledge, and word reading decay without practice. Students need engaging books to keep their skills sharp.

Sounds and Letters

Sounds and Letters . . . well, it's just like it sounds! Each book covers the phonics of a letter, or combination of letters, by using fun words and real-life photos to engage beginner readers. These books introduce the essential tools needed to form a strong basis for reading.

Luke smiled. Zahra giggled.
 "Rufus McGnicken better never look me in the eyes," she said. "I'd give him a treat all right."
 Luke laughed out loud and sat me back on his lap. He scratched my head while I thought about Rufus.
 I thought Rufus was tops. But Zahra and Rufus never got along. They fought over me, mostly. Over who could walk me, to be precise. Most days, Zahra would knock on the door and offer to take me for a walk while Luke worked. Most days, Luke said yes, tossed Zahra my leash, and off we'd go.
 As soon as we left, Rufus would bound out of his door and insist that he come with us. This drove Zahra crazy.
 Zahra was nine months older than Rufus. And those nine months gave Zahra the "right" to be trusted to take a wild Brisket like me to the park and make sure I ran through my obedience drills. Since Rufus was "way younger," his job was to make sure I got all my zoomies in and wiggles out.

 If you ask me, the two of them made the perfect combination for an afternoon at the park. Even if they both bickered a lot.
 "Zahra," Luke said. "I'm sorry. But we'll have to video chat another time. Just got an alert that we've got a new case."
 Luke scratched my wiry fur and asked if I was ready for a new job. I barked. YES!
 "I better let you go straightaway then," Zahra said. "Anyway, Mom just got home. Dad has tea ready, and Mom will want to know how my homework is coming along."
 Luke smiled. "Hope we haven't kept you from it."
 "Not at all! I learned something new. I'll tell Rufus about it after tea. Goodbye, Brisket!"

2 Don't Forget Your Purse

The next morning, a golden beam of sunlight shot through my window and punched me right in the face. I looked at the clock by my bed: 8:00 A.M.
 Mom and Dad would want me to snooze all morning and spend the afternoon stealing, but I couldn't get back to sleep.
 I put on my stockings, a polka-dotted dress, and a pair of granny kicks.

You guessed it. My old lady costume. Jillian and I always have to wear a disguise if we leave the house. All Crooks do.
 I topped off my outfit with a curly gray wig and glasses. One of my best costumes. I call her Mrs. Whiffbaccon. Why? I love the whiff of bacon, of course.
 Last but not least, I grabbed my big brown purse. By the way, big:

PACKING

My room is filled with boxes.
 Yesterday it was filled with stuffed animals and books and posters. Today it is filled with boxes that are filled with stuffed animals and books and posters.
 I'm supposed to be filling more boxes with my stuff. But I don't get it. If I don't want to move, how come I'm stuck
 packing?
 What I need is a helper. I yell from the top of the stairs.

"Mom!"
 I wait for an answer. But I don't get one so I use my outdoor voice.
 "MOM!"
 She comes to the bottom of the stairs
 with an armload of boxes.
 "Hey, Mom, what's big and brown and empty?"
 "Mallory, I don't have time for jokes," Mom says. "We have to pack. We're moving in two days."
 "I know. But what's big and brown and
 empty?"
 Mom blows a piece of hair out of her mouth. "What?"
 "The boxes in my room!" I laugh out loud.
 "Mallory, that's about as funny as an overflowing toilet."
 I happen to think an overflowing toilet is

The Secret

4 THE SECRET

Mom had a jar of emergency money tucked away in the cupboard. It had been there for so long that I knew she didn't remember it. I took my basketball fees from the jar. I planned to pay it back as soon as I could get to the bank, and I knew Mom wouldn't notice.

Then I needed Mom's signature on the forms. I practised signing Mom's name on a blank paper several times before signing the form. Coach A was never going to question that signature. I did a good job.

The lunch meeting started right on schedule. All the girls were dropping off their permission forms on a small desk in front of Coach A. Most of the girls' parents had already sent an e-transfer for the fees, but some girls handed Coach A the cash. I added my signed forms to the top of the pile and gave her my forty dollars.

"Okay, I think we will get started," Coach A began. "I see we are all here, so let's start with what I expect of you. Number one — you must show commitment to this team if you want to play. You will attend all the practices — no excuses unless you are too ill to come to school. Do not plan birthdays and special events on practice days. You have the practice schedule for the whole season. I expect you to work around it. I also expect your full effort at every practice. We have twelve girls on this team. There are more who did not make the team and would be happy to take your place. At practice, we go hard so that we can play hard in the games. You will make every decision based on what is best for the team, not what's best for you. When one person messes up, the whole team accepts it. We will use mistakes to learn and grow. When one person has a great game, credit goes to the whole team. A team's strength is the ability of the team to work together, to take care of each other, to appreciate each other. Everybody good so far?"

We all nodded. We really just wanted to get our uniforms and schedules.

"I believe that on this team, you can learn everything really important in life — commitment, respect, teamwork and learning from mistakes."

Coach A paused. There was an awkward silence. I am not sure I believe that, I thought. But . . . can I please have my jersey?

"Okay," Coach A continued, clapping her hands in front of her. "I will be meeting with each of you over the next two weeks to talk about your role on the
