A Sticky Situation

Imagine one of the most popular students in class asking you to give them the answers for a test. You want to be friends with this student, but you know that cheating is wrong. What should you do? Use the following problem-solving steps to help.

STEP 1: THINK ABOUT IT

Why does the student need the answers from you?

STEP 2: MAKE A PLAN

Is there a way you can help without doing something wrong?

STEP 3: TRY IT OUT

Imagine putting the plan into action. What could go right, and what could go wrong?

STEP 4: CHECK THE RESULTS

If something went wrong in Step 3, what can you change to improve the plan?

Three Wishes

If you could make three wishes to make the world a better place, what would your wishes be?

Minding Your Own Business

Imagine that you have the chance to start your own business.

What kind of business would it be?

What would you name the business?

Who would work at your business?

Use the space below to make a sign to advertise your business.

Cool, Calm, and Collected

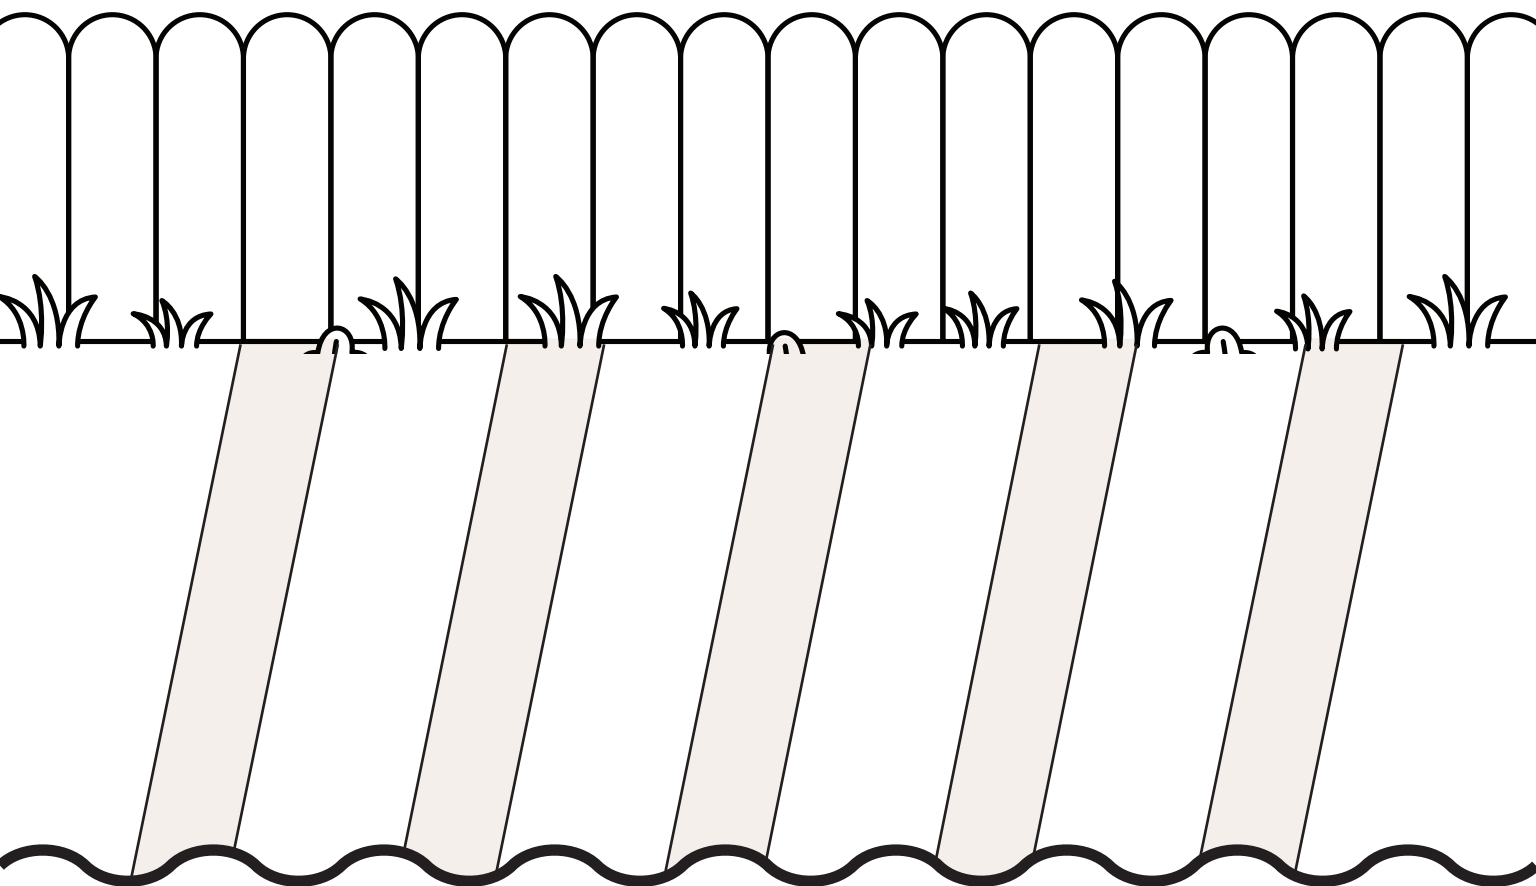

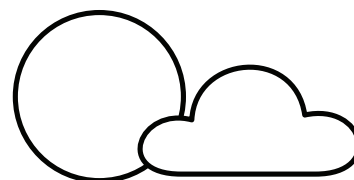

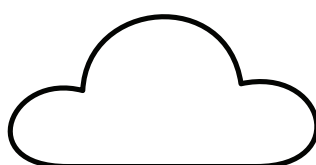

Imagine that you are worried and upset. You want to calm yourself down. Write three calming ideas in the spaces below.

The page features three circular wreaths, each composed of blue pine needles and black berry branches. The wreaths are arranged in a triangular pattern. In the background, large, light blue numbers 1, 2, and 3 are positioned behind each wreath respectively. To the right of the top wreath is a blue star and a smaller asterisk. To the left of the bottom wreath are two blue swirls. To the right of the bottom wreath is a larger blue swirl.

Learning From Mistakes

Before Thomas Edison invented a light bulb that worked, he made a lot of light bulbs that didn't work. He said he hadn't failed. He'd just found many ways that didn't work. In other words, he learned from his mistakes.

* Mistakes can be good teachers. Think of something you tried that didn't work out.

* What did you learn from the mistake?

* What can you do differently next time?
